

Latex Street Paint

The City of Corning uses street striping for several traffic control applications. This includes traffic lines, turning lanes, crosswalks, parking spaces, no parking zones, fire lanes and bike path markings. Each year, the City applies approximately 77,882 linear feet of striping.

The City historically used an oil based paint for street painting. In 2004, the City converted to a more environmentally friendly latex based paint.